CLEAN AIR PROMISE CAMPAIGN CONTINUES

Have YOU made the Clean Air Promise yet? Making this Promise is “our social commitment and we depend on our officials to safeguard it”.

THE PROMISE

I PROMISE TO PROTECT America’s children and families from dangerous air pollution.

Because toxic pollutants such as mercury, smog, carbon, and soot, cause thousands of hospital visits, asthma attacks, and even deaths,

I will support clean air policies and other protections that scientists and public health experts have recommended to the EPA to safeguard our air quality.

Go to <http://peoplenotpolluters.org> and make the promise. The site also allows you to send an email about the promise to your elected state and federal officials.

Fall is here and the League’s program is well under way! Part 1 of the consensus process of our national study on the Federal Role in Education went very well thanks to Marty Ott and her well prepared committee and your lively participation. Get ready for Part 2 by reading the material in this ILR before you go to your unit meeting. LWVUS will take all of the consensus material from around the country and present the results at the national convention in Washington D.C.

Sydell Shayer hosted a very successful new and prospective member meeting at her home on October 17th. Pat Jones and her committee brought together an outstanding group interested in joining the League. Some of them had been intending to join us for a while. But some of them were serious about joining because they had seen us in action over the last year. One person had attended the congressional candidate forum at Forest Park Community College. Another worked for a non profit group who appreciated our explanation of a state wide proposition in the Voters Guide. Another was a candidate who appreciated the work we did with her to get her information in the Guide.

Our experience supports the LWVUS’s findings that people want to see the League at work before they make a commitment to join. The more active and visible we are, the stronger our membership and volunteer base will be. Take someone you know who might join us to a League event.

We hope that some of you will join us at the Fall Conference in Sedalia on November 5th. It is a wonderful opportunity to meet people from our sister Leagues around the state and gear up for the 2012 election season.

In the meantime, we will be keeping a close eye on the Voter I.D. issue, proposed tax legislation, the EPA, health care reform, and the other issues we care about. We will keep you posted.

Good News from the Joint Office..

Thanks to all who contributed to the League of Women Voters of Missouri “Bring Back the Day Campaign”, Anna Mennerick is back to 30 hours per week. Next Goal is to get 6 of Julie Behrens hours returned to Missouri tasks. Thanks for supporting the League!

Membership “Tea Time” Rousing Success

Twelve new and prospective members had the opportunity to learn more about the League on Oct. 17 when they were treated to a beautiful tea and reception at the home of Sydell Shayer. Linda McDaniel talked about the League from a historical perspective, Kathleen Farrell summarized our upcoming events, and over tea and delicious desserts, guests were able to ask questions about the League. Special thanks to Sydell for hosting the event at her lovely home and to Janis Pupillo for assisting with the food, setup, and cleanup.

Pat Jones, Membership Chair

“League in the Loop” Tailgate Sale

Our “League in the Loop” Tailgate Sale held Labor Day, Sept. 5th, went well, although we had fewer vendors than we had hoped for. However, with 100⁰ temperatures the week before, I believe many perspective vendors thought it would be just too hot to sit all day on the asphalt.

As it turned out, it was a beautiful cool day—even a bit chilly at 5 am—and the vendors who did sign up had wonderful weather.

One lady who came as we opened told me she was so glad we were having the sale. She had borrowed $20., collected some items and asked if she could buy half a space. She needed to make some money to save her house.

I couldn’t have done the sale without the help of Elise and Denny Joerger who came on that very hot Saturday morning to help me set up the barriers with the NO PARKING signs. K Wentzien who drove me to University City to mark the spaces and Esther and Jim Clark who came at 5am on Labor Day to help put the barriers in place and put up the directional signs. Jim came back at 3 o’clock to help me take it all down and I did appreciate that.

Of course I couldn’t have done any of it without Julie Behrens who ran the letters and envelopes, handled the reservations both mail and in person and printed a list for me so I could check in the vendors and then ran a final list so I could make this report.

We had a total of 30 vendors, and after expenses for advertising and a portable toilet cleared $310.

If we had had our booth we would have made at least $500. more. The space we usually occupy was completely empty and it would have helped the sale if we had been there. Some people asked me where we were. One lady told me about several items she had bought from us last year and a gentleman asked where the ladies were. When I explained—he said they had nice things.

Being there would have given the league visibility — something we always talked about in League meetings. Hopefully next year.

Barbara Elbrecht, “League in the Loop” Tailgate Chairman

HEALTH EFFECTS OF AIR POLLUTION

Air pollution has major impacts on health with particular effect on those with pulmonary disease or asthma. Particulate Matter (PM) consists of tiny particles that are easily inhaled deep into the lungs and may cause a variety of harmful health effects including hospitalizations for worsened heart diseases, emergency room visits for asthma, and premature death. PM is caused by cars and trucks (especially diesels), fireplaces, woodstoves, and windblown dust from roadways, agriculture and construction. Ozone develops as chemicals emitted from motor vehicles, industrial emissions, and consumer products react with sunlight to form ozone in the atmosphere. Ozone health effects include: cough, chest tightness, difficulty taking a deep breath, worsened asthma symptoms, and lung inflammation. Ozone greatly impacts both asthma sufferers as well as those with chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD). Carbon Monoxide impacts on health include: chest pain in heart patients, headaches, nausea, reduced mental alertness and death at very high levels. Any source that burns fuel such as cars, trucks, construction and farming equipment, and residential heaters and stoves can release carbon monoxide into the air. Nitrogen Dioxide is a reactive gas capable of damaging the cells lining the respiratory tract. Nitrogen Dioxide (NO₂) can cause increased response to allergens and is formed at the same time as carbon monoxide. Toxic Air Contaminants impacts on health include cancer, chronic eye, lung or skin irritation, and neurological and reproductive disorders. Toxic air contaminants are formed by cars and trucks (especially diesels), industrial sources, such as chrome platters', neighborhood businesses (dry cleaners and service stations), as well as building materials and products. These health effects have been documented by numerous academic and EPA studies in the 80's and 90's. Please see the previous ILR article on air pollution (http://www.lwvstl.org/files/air_pollution.pdf) for additional information.

With the economic problems of the United States and the world, there has been increasing attacks on clean air and public health. Since the 1970s the League has advocated for strong public health and environmental protections. Congress has proposed the weakening of the Clean Air Act and the federal agencies that implement the law. The League has objected to the proposed revisions to the National Ambient Air Quality Standards which would weaken and delay implementation of the Clean Air Act.

The League of Women Voters US has launched a campaign seeking to renew America's promise to protect clean air and public health embodied in the highly successful and popular Clean Air Act. The Clean Air Promise Campaign will call on citizens, elected officials and community leaders around the country to join in making this simple promise to protect the health of our children and families.

Visit the LWVUS Web Page for the Clean Air Promise <http://peoplenotpolluters.org/>

and take the Promise.

Did you know that the League of Women Voters' positions on Natural Resources were formulated as early as 1958? These positions came out of League member concern for depletion and conservation of natural resources as far back as the 1920s. Early study of water resources led to an understanding of the relationship between water and air pollution. This is the foundation under our current Clean Air Promise Campaign. COMMON CORE STANDARDS

Students who move from one part of the United States to another during their K-12 school careers are likely to encounter substantial variations in requirements for graduation. The Common Core Standards Initiative (CCSI, 2010) stated: “We need standards to ensure that all students, no matter where they live, are prepared for success in postsecondary education and the workforce. Common standards will help ensure that students are receiving a high quality education consistently, from school to school and state to state. Common standards will provide a greater opportunity to share experiences and best practices within and across states that will improve our ability to best serve the needs of students.”

Currently, standards for student performance vary widely by state. The roots of current state-to-state inconsistencies lie in the fact that public education in the United States has traditionally been a local responsibility. However, textbook publishers have created something of a "de facto" national curriculum, based on market needs. Consequently, many textbooks from major publishers have reflected the curricular choices that were made by educational groups in the largest states. Some publishers do create textbooks and other curricula for smaller markets. Rothman (2009) summarized the efforts of various groups to create common standards across the United States. Initial efforts to foster development of national standards and a related system of assessments in the core subject areas began in the early 1990's through awarding grants to a dozen national organizations. The National Governors Association (NGA) and the Council of Chief State School Officers (CCSSO) launched the Common Core State Standards initiative in March 2009 after the nation's governors agreed in concept to adopt a uniform set of standards. The final report was issued on June 2, 2010 (NGA, 2010), and, by early 2011, 40 states have adopted the Standards. The adopting states are currently aligning them to their own state standards.

The Fordham Institute (Carmichael, et al. 2010) reported that the Common Core standards received high marks when compared to state standards across the country. The Institute suggests that Common Core Standards represent an opportunity for creating consistency and raising standards in all states.

ASSESSMENTS

The implementation of the federal No Child Left Behind Act of 2001 has created a 50-state and 50-test environment in public education. As a result state-to-state expectations and performances vary greatly. States publish annual reports of Adequate Yearly Progress (AYP), which are required by federal law, but the meaning of "proficient" in those reports can vary widely from one state to another (Cronin, et al. 2007).

Larger testing companies market a variety of norm-referenced standardized tests. However, they are designed to rank students, rather than to determine how well students have mastered curricular objectives as criterion-referenced tests would do. The National Assessment of Educational Progress (NAEP) publishes results that are technically adequate for state-to-state (and international) comparisons, but that assessment is not designed to produce individual student scores. NAEP requires a large sample of students to produce results. Most school systems are too small to qualify for testing that would produce local NAEP results. The tradition of local governance has led to inconsistent requirements and standards for student performance across the country. Thus, in 2010, the United States does not have a consistent set of academic assessments for grades K-12.

Two coalitions, together representing 44 states and the District of Columbia, won a U.S. Department of Education competition for $330 million dollars federal aid to design "comprehensive assessment systems" aligned to the Common Core and designed to measure whether students are on track for college and career success. The awards, announced in September 2010, were divided between the Partnership for Assessment of Readiness for College and Careers (PARCC), comprised of 26 states receiving $170 million, and the SMARTER Balanced Assessment

Consortium that comprises 31 states and received $160 million. At least 12 states participated in both coalitions and are waiting to decide which assessment system will best meet their needs. An advantage of having assessments that are used in more than one state is that results from all participating states could be compared.

WHY NOT NATIONAL STANDARDS OR ASSESSMENTS?

The most common arguments against adopting the Common Core Standards for K-12 center on two issues: 1) the cost and difficulty of changing the existing curriculum and assessments and (2) the sovereignty of states in issues related to education and local control. Governor Rick Perry of Texas stated that the Race to the Top funding would only generate a one-time amount of $75 per student, yet cost Texas taxpayers an additional $3 million. A third argument is that the individual state standards might be more rigorous. However, states that adopt the Common Core are permitted to add 15 percent more in content. Another concern is the potential to use scores from the student assessments as a major component of teacher evaluations and merit pay plans, an idea that has popular appeal. (TIME, 2010). In August 2010, ten of the nation's premier educational researchers (Baker, Barton, Darling-Hammond, Haertel, Ladd, Linn, Ravid, Rothstein, Shavelson & Shepard, 2010) co-authored a report that cautioned against relying on student test scores as a major indicator for evaluating teachers, citing the technical problems associated with using scores from standardized student assessments in value-added statistical models.

DOES THE UNITED STATES NEED A NATIONAL CURRICULUM?

The U.S. Department of Education presents the view that, since the developers of the Common Core Standards and the proposed assessments have been groups with state representation rather than the federal government, neither program is a federal initiative. (U.S. Department of Education, 2010, March 13). In March 2011, the Albert Shanker Institute issued a call for common curriculum guidelines (Albert Shanker Institute, 2011; Gewertz, C. 2011, March). This document voices the concern that common assessments are being developed from the common standards with no curriculum in between. In May 2011, another group published an article with a different view: "Closing the Door on Innovation: Why One National Curriculum is Bad for America" (2011), discussed by Gewertz, C. (2011, May). The article also cites the prohibition against a federal curriculum contained in the 1965 ESEA.

If No, what other accountability measures might you suggest? (choose one)

- A. Continue to allow the states to develop their own assessments.
- B. Suggest that the local education districts use their own assessments or adopt one that is a nationally norm-referenced assessment such as the Stanford Achievement Test or Iowa Test of Basic Skills.
- C. Suggest that districts use a portfolio type of assessment where student projects and activities would be scored holistically

6. National standards should lead to: (choose one)

- A. A nationally mandated curriculum to be aligned to the national standards and assessments.
- B. A national curriculum that is only suggested but not mandated.
- C. A suggested structure for states and local education agencies to develop their own curriculum.
- D. No national curriculum.

7. What role should the national assessment consortia play in student evaluation? (Rank order)

- A. Provide an assessment system that is aligned to the Common Core Standards.
- B. Provide comparison data showing progress toward reaching Common Core Standards.
- C. Provide criteria for determining readiness for college and careers.
- D. Provide information to students, parents, teachers and school districts about student achievement.
- E. Provide diagnostic information on each child.

8. Data from the national assessments are often difficult for parents, teachers and others to understand. If we have a national assessment, what information is most important to be reported to parents, teachers, students and the community? (choose one)

- A. Data should be “norm referenced” (where students are ranked) for district comparison only.
- B. Data should be “criterion referenced” and clearly informative so that teachers, parents, and students know how individual students have mastered criteria established at a national level.
- C. Data should be used to determine “cut” scores knowing if students have mastered requirements for special grade levels.

9. Information from nationally required assessment data should be used to (Choose one):

- A. Sanction schools not measuring up to the specific levels
- B. Reward schools that achieve high scores
- C. Rank teachers based on student test score data
- D. Reward teachers who have exemplary scores
- E. Inform districts how their population compares to others similar to theirs.
